

Biography:

César "Chino" Pérez trombone player, arranger

César "Chino" Pérez is one of those former members of "Trabuco Venezolano", who now lives in Europe. He comes from the popular neighbourhood "23 de Enero" in Caracas, Venezuela, where he took his first musical steps as a trombonist.

During his career in Venezuela he was an active member of famous bands such as "Dimensión Latina", "Naty y su Orq.", "Los Melódicos" and the above mentioned "Trabuco Venezolano."

In the summer of 1992 César decided to leave for Europe to broaden his professional knowledge. He entered the Rotterdam Conservatory in Holland, and graduated as a trombone teacher five years later. During that time he appeared on numerous European stages, discovering and learning from different musical influences.

Today, César lives in Germany, where he develops projects with musicians from all over the world.

Since 2001 he has been performing with the band "Heavytones" of the successful comedy show "TV Total", which appears nightly on German television. This has given him the opportunity to share the stage with many internationally renowned artists.
